FOREWORD

*"When we mean to build,
We first survey the plot, then draw the model;
And when we see the figure of the house,
Then must we rate the cost of the erection,
Which if we find outweighs ability,
What do we then but draw anew the model."*

—SHAKESPEARE IN HENRY IV

IN an architect imagination, the creative power, labors for a utilitarian project; in embryo a castle in the air, and again and again a castle in the air until such time the potency of the dollar mark seductively allies itself with the imagination and then only does this power crystallize into a material rendering, in channels of art and artisanship. A material rendering, yes, but with what success for

*"'Tis not an eye or nose, we beauty call,
But the full force and joint result of all."*

What a mysterious mandate is herein contained. Utility and service fundamental to human need, but preeminently Form and Color in perfect rhythm creates that subtle melody of sound that few can hear, synchronous and audible only to the poetic sense of man.

The Gothic arch, it's horizontal right as Sound, it's horizontal left as Color, the two, a dualistic symbol of a seven fold rhythmic manifestation. Coalesced in final cadence in the apex, we see that of Form, possessing the quality of each and of neither; a triune whole subserving the purpose of structure: ART IN UTILITY.
